Patrick Fleming, director of Salt Lake County's Division of Behavioral Health, and Kerry Steadman, Salt Lake County's Homeless Services coordinator made the Community Foundation of Utah's 2013 "Enlightened 50" (E-50) list, which recognizes individuals for making a measurable difference in their community.

"Patrick Fleming and Kerry Steadman work tirelessly to improve the quality of life for all Salt Lake County citizens," said Mayor Ben McAdams. "I am continually impressed by their commitment to our community. Compassion and doing what is right is behind all of Patrick and Kerry's decision making; their inclusion in 'Enlightened 50' is well-deserved."

Those on this year's list represent various business, community and government organizations from across the state, including Salt Lake County Councilman Sam Granato.

"The E-50 is a way for the Community Foundation of Utah to bring together people who share a common passion for improving our communities. Members come from across the state and are being recognized for the work they do in their community; whether it's defined as a cause, or a group of people, or a particular place. We certainly hope that Kerry and Pat enjoy being members and that this helps to further the work that they are doing," said Frasier Nelson, executive director of the Community Foundation of Utah.

This is the fourth year the Community Foundation of Utah is presenting their "Enlightened 50" list. Criteria for recognition falls under the following categories:

1. An innovator: pioneering original and sustainable approaches to the critical issues facing our state and its people.
2. A builder: committed to community engagement and the common good.
3. A visionary: most likely to make a profound mark on Utah's quality of life.

Patrick Fleming and Kerry Steadman reach these criteria everyday as they develop and carry out program techniques and best practices for how we work with and build up our vulnerable citizens.
